We are delighted to announce the official launch of the EPSRC Centre for Doctoral Training in Diversity-Led, Mission-Driven Research.

Based at the University of Glasgow, our innovative Centre for Doctoral Training is focused on bringing together diverse teams to tackle interdisciplinary, mission-driven challenges at the forefront of research.

During the 4-year PhD, students will take part in a bespoke training programme, supported with networking events and tailored coaching, and take advantage of the research and placement opportunities provided by our wide range of external partners.

We offer fully funded studentships, which cover tuition fees and research and training support, with the provision of an enhanced stipend, aiming to remove financial barriers. Part-time study options are also available.

We prioritise diversity, creating an inclusive space for varied talents to produce transformative interdisciplinary research, bringing together world-changing experts from various fields to tackle complex problems and ensuring that our research is impactful and aligned with broader societal goals.

Our Mission Priority Areas are:

- AI & Big Data
- Beyond Net Zero
- Future Telecoms
- Problem-Based Interdisciplinary Research
- Quantum Technologies
- Technology Touching Life

We believe diversity is the driving force behind groundbreaking innovation, so join us on this voyage of discovery!

Applications Open: 15 October 2024

Application Deadline: 31 January 2025

PhD Start: 1 September 2025

During this project cycle, DiveIn has received funding for 5 intakes, ending recruitment in 2029.
